

You have learned about ThingLink and Padlet, but have you thought about how the two could work together? The teacher who wrote this blog was seeking a way to have her students post their ThingLink projects all in one place. By posting their work in one place, students have the ability to give feedback and comment on other students' work. These comments can be, and should be, moderated by the teacher.

Additionally, Padlet and ThingLink can come together to produce the ultimate word wall. In this example, students created an interactive word wall for vocabulary and units of study. This type of word wall can be a powerful way to solidify learning of new content, providing varied support for students of all learning styles. It's a one-stop-shop!
